

Final Exam

CS 540
Spring 2001
Craig A. Rich

As you know, I have reached a crossroads in my career and will be transitioning from teaching to technical administration at Cal Poly Pomona. In fact, I signed on offer yesterday, and will begin my new job on June 18. No matter what my future brings, I will never have a job with the intangible rewards that teaching brings; there is no better “pay” than seeing students move on to productive careers and futures, and benefit (hopefully!?) from their experience at Cal Poly Pomona.

- 1 Write a paper describing your thoughts and plans for your future and your career as a computer scientist. There are no “wrong” responses or future plans. It does not matter if you have never worked as a computer scientist, have no idea what job you will have, or are planning to weave baskets (or play jazz music, which I am planning to do more of in the future). I’m just curious about what you would like to be doing in your future.
