What We're About

The Finance Society is an organization at Cal Poly Pomona that was created to serve as a gathering for students interested in finance, and to be used as a development tool in professional growth.

Throughout the years, Finance Society members are given the tools needed to enter and succeed in the finance industry by engaging in many diverse activities, among them are investment competitions, professional guest forums, and developmental workshops.

During the '05-'06 year, the Finance Society became internationally chartered with the Financial Management Association International (FMA), and, in addition, adopted the National Honor Society membership. The FMA was established in 1970, and is known as "the global leader in developing and disseminating knowledge about financial decision making," (www.fma.org). At the end of the 2006 academic year, the FMA designated Cal Poly's Finance Society as a "Superior Chapter," the highest honor for an FMA Student Chapter.

This upcoming year, our goal is to maintain our prestigious designation and focus on the professional growth of our members.

Benefits

There are many benefits to joining the Finance Society, some of which include: networking with peers, faculty and finance professionals; attending conferences in other states; familiarizing your name within the industry with our Resume Anthology; and job opportunities. In addition, we also offer an Incentive Program that rewards our committed members upon graduation. (Visit our website to find out more information on our Incentive Program)

Speakers

The Society also has professional guest speakers from different financial backgrounds that come and discuss their specific industry. Often, these speakers come to recruit as well. Just last year, the Office of the Comptroller of Currency, from the US Department of the Treasury, recruited a member for the National Bank Examiner position. This year we have several speakers lined up from companies such as Primerica, OCC, and Stalla, just to name a few.

Future Events

This academic year, Finance Society members will have the opportunity to attend the FMA Annual Conference in Chicago, in late March. If you have any questions about this or other events please visit our website for further information.
