

CITING IN TEXT

(See pages 168-174 in the APA Manual<sup>1</sup>)

General principles

- The important thing is to make sure that the reader can access references by following a clear given retrieval path.
- Initials are used for authors' first names; show only one initial.
- Use quotation marks.
- Note different placing and emphasis given to dates

One work by a single author

There are a variety of ways to include needed information, such as:

- ▶ Orlosky (1961) described the beginning stages . . .
- ▶ An earlier study of the beginning stages (Orlosky, 1961) . . .
- ▶ In 1961 Orlosky described the beginning stages . . .
- ▶ In an earlier study of the beginning stages, Orlosky (1961) described . . . Orlosky also found no evidence that . . .

One work by two authors

Both authors should be cited every time, i.e.:

Loral & Harty (1945) found that . . .

One work by more than two authors

Cite all authors the first time, then only the first authors followed by et al.:

Huie, Dui, & Louis (1951) found . . . Huie, et al. (1951) ducked the issue . . .
