POMONA, Calif. —May 14, 2008— The spotlight will be on the Cal Poly Pomona College of Engineering on Friday, May 30 as it celebrates 50 years of hands-on learning.

Despite humble beginnings while the campus was still a satellite of Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, the College of Engineering is now nationally ranked with an enrollment of nearly 5,000 students.

An anniversary dinner will celebrate the college's history and look toward the future of engineering education at Cal Poly Pomona. Festivities will begin at 6 p.m. with a VIP reception at the W. Keith and Janet Kellogg University Art Gallery, followed by dinner beginning at 7 p.m. in Ursa Major at the Bronco Student Center.

"This benefit will directly impact student learning opportunities. Event proceeds go toward equipment, facilities and faculty development that help the College of Engineering prepare students for an engineering career in a global economy," said College of Engineering Dean Edward C. Hohmann.

Anniversary dinner admission tickets are $100 each and VIP Kellogg Art Gallery reception/dinner tickets are $250. Guest speaker, Dr. Patricia D. Galloway, author of "The 21st Century Engineer," will bring her experience and expertise in global engineering and construction to Cal Poly Pomona as she talks about the number one challenge facing engineers today.
